

B-1B Lancer weapon systems officer and electronic warfare officer

1st. Lt. Chad Nishizuka

What opportunities has the Air Force opened for you?

The Air Force has assisted me financially through undergraduate and graduate schooling. In the future I plan to attend medical support school. I'm definitely grateful for the support I have recieved thus far.

How do you support today's war fighting efforts?

The B-1B Lancer is important in today's fight. My mission includes providing close air support to our brothers on the ground.

Hometown

Kailua, Hawaii

Entered Air Force

June 2006

“The opportunity to serve and protect my country is an honor and I'm glad I made the decision to be a part of the Air Force family seven years ago.”

Photo by Airmen 1st Class Corey Hawk